Yank Expert Cites Death Ray As Warning of Jap Ingenuity

By WILLIAM GLOVER
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK, April 12—Japanese efforts to develop an effective death ray as a grim application of the principles of radar should be, says Roger I. Wilkinson, a permanent warning to the American people.

"The public, including most American scientists," says Wilkinson, who directed a survey of Japanese radar developments for the far eastern air forces, "have the mistaken impression that the Japanese did nothing original in the war, and only made poor copies of such Allied equipment and techniques as they could capture, and whatever the Germans chose to give them. This is a dangerous attitude."

Knows His Subject
Wilkinson, back now as a technician in the Bell Telephone Laboratories, spent 26 war months in the Pacific and was assigned to a close-up study of Japanese radar research immediately after V-J day as a civilian consultant with the air technical intelligence group.

Wilkinson said that when the war ended, the Japanese were ready to try a death ray machine capable of focusing a lethal beam over a one-mile range. In experimental tests, the ray had been able to kill a rabbit within about 20 minutes at a distance of 100 feet. The ultra-high frequency radio signals cause blood clots in the victim's lungs to break down so that hemorrhages result.

Yank Expert Cites Death Ray As Warning of Jap Ingenuity

NEW YORK, April 12—Japanese efforts to develop an effective death ray as a grim application of the principles of radar should be, says Roger I. Wilkinson, a permanent warning to the American people.

"The public, including most American scientists," says Wilkinson, who directed a survey of Japanese radar developments for the far eastern air forces, "have the mistaken impression that the Japanese did nothing original in the war, and only made poor copies of such Allied equipment and techniques as they could capture, and whatever the Germans chose to give them. This is a dangerous attitude."

Knows His Subject
Wilkinson, back now as a technician in the Bell Telephone Laboratories, spent 26 war months in the Pacific and was assigned to a close-up study of Japanese radar research immediately after V-J day as a civilian consultant with the air technical intelligence group.

Wilkinson said that when the war ended, the Japanese were ready to try a death ray machine capable of focusing a lethal beam over a one-mile range. In experimental tests, the ray had been able to kill a rabbit within about 20 minutes at a distance of 100 feet. The ultra-high frequency radio signals cause blood clots in the victim's lungs to break down so that hemorrhages result.

The objective, Wilkinson explained, apparently was to use the device against advancing ground troops by training the beam on personnel for three or four hours.

During much of the war, concentrated development of radar was neglected under the Japanese psychology of offensive because the devices were considered primarily defensive.

On surrender day, Wilkinson said, the Japanese were three years behind the Allies in development of fire control and air radar devices because of faults in military policy and liaison. The Japanese utilized only about 10 per cent of available scientific talent for war purposes.

Early warning radar was developed to a satisfactory degree and a warning network established with its center located just inside the imperial palace grounds at Tokyo, Wilkinson said, but fire control and air interception equipment trailed far behind because of a lack of powerful transmitting tubes capable of operating at ultra-high frequencies. This lack enabled highly effective jamming of signals by American equipment.

In the latter stages of the war, antiaircraft batteries had to wait for visual observation of planes before firing.

Japanese electrical equipment, said Wilkinson, was highly efficient and workmanlike.

"The errors on the part of the military in Japan are now well appreciated by all Japanese ex-military, academic and industrial leaders," he added. "They would not make the same mistakes again. Thus it would be folly to discount the potential ability of Japanese scientists, with proper leadership and organization, to make a very creditable showing in inventing and building all kinds of electronic devices in competition with ourselves or any other nation."

When William Penn created the first prison system in Pennsylvania, in 1822, he stipulated that "all prisons shall be workhouses."

NEW RAIL SYSTEM REGULATES CROSSING

Big Four and Pennsy Equipment in Use at Crestline.

Special to The Star
CRESTLINE, April 12—Activation of the second step in the new electrical control system for handling trains at the crossings of the Big Four and Pennsy railroads here, took place Thursday when the signals and switches were put into operation between the crossings and the west railroad yards.

Initial operations of the new system were begun two weeks ago when the Central train control plant was switched on at the new control tower. Officials of both railroads were present for the operation.

Putting the new system, the very latest of electrical equipment for handling trains by "remote control," into effect two weeks ago effected only the direct cross-over between the two railroads.

The west yards was integrated into the control network Thursday and the remainder of the railroads yards will be secured onto the new system by the end of April, it was said.

Activation of the entire plant has been divided into separate steps so as to keep delay of regular traffic to a minimum.

NAME ONE OTHER CITY... Even Half the Size of Marion

Name one other city where 250 is the largest crowd that can see high school or city league teams play basketball. That doesn't stack Marion up so well with other cities and it isn't fair to our young athletes—girls and boys. There are dozens of other reasons why Marion needs a gym to seat up to 4,000 besides for basketball, indoor baseball and track meets. The new Harding High School on the athletic field site will provide this—with plenty of parking space.

PROSPECT CHURCH HONOR RETURNED SERVICEMEN

Lutheran Church Has Banquet For Returned G.I.s

Special to The Star

PROSPECT — Last Friday night in the school building St. Paul Lutheran church held a church "Family Night" dinner honoring 44 service personnel.

Rev. G. C. Heffelfinger of Willard gave the principal address, followed by Dr. Carroll Kitchey of Marion, who entertained with magic.

Thirty-five from the church have been honorably discharged; eight are still in service. One gold star is on the church's service flag, in memory of Richard Finckel, killed in an airplane accident last fall. Flowers in his memory were placed near the church's honor roll.

The candle-centered tables in the high school auditorium were decorated in patriotic colors.

Edward Behrens was toastmaster. A trumpet solo "Silvia" was given by Paul Edward Lauer. The Lauer quartet furnished several numbers and group singing was accompanied by Lorin B. McNeal, a veteran.

Approximately 180 were present.

Alabam Smiles Truman, Bawls for His Mama

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, April 19 — President Truman yesterday welcomed "Alabam" to the White House, but "Alabam" seemed more interested in the absence of his "Mama" than in the President.

When presentation ceremonies were concluded on the lawn, Mr. Truman eyed the 185-pound yearling bull and said:

"He wants his mama, he's hungry."

Alabam, two months old today and just taken away from his mother Wednesday, traveled to Washington by passenger plane as a good will emissary for Birmingham's stock show and rodeo April 29-May 4.

The President sent the pure bred Angus to Secretary of Agriculture Anderson for further feeding on the latter's farm. Eventually it will find its way into the world food pool.

NAME ONE OTHER CITY...

Even Half the Size of Marion

Name one other city even half the size of Marion which doesn't have a fire-proof public auditorium to seat approximately 2,000 persons. There are few, if any. In an auditorium of that size, school dramatic and musical events would be held. It would also be used by the public for convention meetings, public speakers of renown, musical events and other public affairs of cultural, entertainment or educational value. The few places which are available in which large groups may assemble rent for such a high figure that they are prohibitive for most organizations or else the rent eats up most of the profits for the sponsoring groups which are working for charitable purposes. The new Harding High School will provide such an auditorium for all civic purposes with ample parking space.

Can you imagine the improvement of being able to hold graduation exercises in the new High School auditorium over the old Chautauqua building? On rainy days, which so frequently occur, you would enjoy the exercises in a comfortable spacious auditorium befitting this important event. All desiring entrance could be accommodated and there will be ample parking space for cars.

THIS is a memo to all South high school basketball fans. Don't make the trip to Marion Friday night to see the Tigers' game with Harding high school because you won't get in.

George Miller, South faculty manager, revealed Tuesday that year in a "cigar box" and only 250—that's right—spectators can witness the contest.

South has been allotted only 50 tickets, 10 adults and 40 students, and that's all the blue and gold will get. Needless to say, chances of getting them this day are gone.

In any event, Miller warns all South fans that "they'll only be wasting their time if they go to Marion to see the game. There will be no tickets sold at the gate. Only 250 can be accommodated."

FOUR

Ohioan Served in Four Armies

Unusual Record Credited to George Buijtdijk, Veteran of World War II.

By The Associated Press
AKRON, O., April 19 — Many veterans are coming home with tales of service in some Army or Navy unit but 20-year-old George Buijtdijk feels he can top them all.

Buijtdijk served in four different armies during World War II. A resident here 10 years, he was working as a salesman in the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. export division office in South Africa when the war started in 1939. He joined the South African home guard and stayed in it until the company returned him here in 1941.

Pearl Harbor put the United States in the war but Buijtdijk was refused enlistment in the American army because he was a native of Holland.

U. S. military authorities sent him to the Netherlands army and he was trained in Canada. Then he was sent to England as a tank corpsman.

Tanks were too slow for him, however, and he got himself taken into the Royal Air Force in England. The RAF put him in a crew flying twin-engine bombers over the English channel to Europe.

Eventually he realized his aim—joining the U. S. fighting forces. He got into the AAF.

Back he came to the United States for another training course.

and then went off to the South Pacific in September, 1943. There he served with the Fifth emergency reserve group, landing on Yank Beach, Guadalcanal, and behind Japanese lines.

He stayed on that job until the end of the war when he was returned to the United States for discharge. There was very little talk about Buijtdijk's service.

Buijtdijk's decorations include the Pacific theater ribbon with nine battle stars, a medal from the Dutch government, the Philippine liberation ribbon and the bronze star.

The wandering ex-soldier is a native of Rotterdam, Holland, where his father, mother, two sisters and a brother survived the German occupation of that country. The Goodyear company said it planned to reassign him to Holland as its field representative.

Buijtdijk's wife, the former Katherine Tenney, is here.

Rep. Smith Attacks New Deal on Extension of Price Control

Frederick C. Mr. Smith said, "The only position (R) Eighth Ohio sible hope that new remains for the house during de-llaying the effects upon the poor. The bill extending the which is upon as and to prevent act for another year t from increasing, is to remove New Deal administration every possible shackle from pro- ductive industry imposed by the OPA and the many other totalitarian de- vices and restraints that have been forced upon industry, busi- ness and the market, and balanc- ing the federal budget by making drastic reductions in operating costs."

Mr. Smith said it is just plain double talk on the part of the administration to try and make the people believe that price con- trol will be terminated not later than June 30, 1947, and that the office of price administration would be abolished on that date as stated in the bill, while at the same time definitely retaining the principle of federal price control and specific provisions for keeping wide open the way for the administration to come before congress and ask for further re- newal of the price control act and the continuance of its operation under another department or agency of the government. In fact, Mr. Smith said the bill directs the President to recommend to the congress the continuance of price control beyond 1947 in respect to any and all commodities he deems to be in such critically short supply as to necessitate in his judg- ment, such continuance."

Mr. Smith asked the house if there might not be the possibility of some political horse trading in view of the fact that the pric- e of federal control of prices of commodities was retained in the bill but that wage controls were not, instead made to appear that they were permanently abol- ished.

Why was it claimed that both price and wage control were nec- essary during the war in order to hold the price line and prevent inflation? he asked. Has the cessation of hostilities altered the situation?

Mr. Smith said that both price and wage control were nec- essary during the war in order to hold the price line and prevent inflation. He asked: Has the cessation of hostilities altered the situation?

Clies False Ground

"To be sure, the New Deal is on false ground here. True wages and prices cannot be treated apart from each other, assuredly not in a free market. Only in a totali- tarian economy like Russia is this possible."

Mr. Smith branded subside as a delus on and snare and one of the worst schemes for robbing the poor ever conceived by man."

"This bill provides for the use of federal funds to the amount of roughly $1,500,000,000 to subsidize or reduce the retail price of rub- ber, meat, flour, petroleum, cop- per, lead, zinc, and certain other unnamed articles. In the 1930's the New Deal resorted to the use of subsidies on a grand scale for the purpose of increasing or reducing prices. Now it uses sub- sidies to deflate or reduce prices. The New Deal resorted to the gov- ernment printing press to raise funds to pay subsidies to increase prices. Now it resorts to the gov- ernment printing press to raise funds to pay subsidies to reduce prices. Yesterday government print money cured the sick econ- omy of excessive low prices. Today government print money cures the sick economy of exces- sive high prices."

The real source of inflation which is at this moment so greatly concerns every citizen, and more particularly the poor, it is to be directly attributed to the New Deal policy of financing deficits with printing press money. The ever mounting price both man- ifest and impending are but an effect of this antisocial policy."

League of Nations Is Put to Death Quietly

By the Associated Press

GENEVA, April 19.—The League of Nations ended its exile on yesterday.

Delegates of 34 nations, out- numbered by gallery spectators, gathered 'yes' late in the after- noon to a resolution providing for the liquidation of its affairs.

With effect from the day fol- lowing the close of the present session of the assembly the League of Nations shall cease to exist except for the sole purpose of the liquidation of its affairs.

Thus the first major peace or- ganism of the century expired 26 years, three months and eight days after its founding. It was conceived by Woodrow Wilson but never was joined by the United States.

BOARDS GUARD VETERANS' JOBS

Statement Issued Following Goble's Letter Urging Protection of GI's Rights.

Members of local selective service boards asserted today they would make extra efforts to guard the reemployment rights of war veterans.

Their announcements followed receipt of letters from State Selective Service Director C. W. Goble urging the boards to make a record of all facts in connection with violations of GI rights and negotiate with the employer for a settlement.

The state director's letters were addressed to reemployment committee members of the boards. Local boards report they have been receiving quite a number of claims from veterans, but reported that so far no violations had been reached in a case. When a veteran appeals his claim for reemployment, stating that his service was interrupted by military training, the federal court in Toledo where the United States district attorney acts as the veterans' counsel.

Col. Goble told the local boards in his letter. With each passing day the public is becoming more conscious of the sacrifices made by the veterans who left their jobs and homes to enter the armed forces. Unless we as protectors of veterans' reemployment rights vigorously fight for these rights to one else will do the job for them.

Meanwhile United States Employment Service officials are making extra efforts to place veterans in responsible jobs. Francis Field, veterans employment representative, reports that Marion employers are favorably impressed with the veteran apprentice system established by the employment service. The plan provides that an employer pays a veteran an apprentice wage and gives him on the job training while the employment service pays the veteran the difference between his wage and that of an experienced worker. The employment service will pay up to $65 a month for a single man and up to $90 for a married man. Mr. Field reports:

More than 30 veterans in Marion are now working under the apprentice system and jobs for about 20 more are pending. Mr. Field said.

OHIO'S HIGH COURT GETS BRIBERY CASE

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., April 19.—The Ohio supreme court yesterday heard claims that bribery could be prosecuted anywhere in Ohio if the court of appeals decision freeing former Clark County Prosecutor Jerome A. Nevius of bribery charges were upheld.

The claim was presented by Atty. Homer C. Cory of Springfield, a special state prosecutor in the Nevius case who presented the state's contention that the appellate court decision should be reviewed by the high tribunal and reversed. Today's arguments were on a state motion for leave to appeal.

Cory contended testimony of alleged co-conspirators which the appellate court had ruled out was proper in the case and should have been considered.

If the appellate court decision is upheld to a point it will be virtually impossible to convict anyone of bribery in Ohio, he declared.

Nevius was convicted on three counts, two of which called for the receipt of money from the proprietors of the Silver Dollar, a gambling resort and the other of receiving sums of money from them. The appellate court completely freed Nevius on two of the charges and reversed his conviction on the other because of alleged error and remanded it for a new trial in the common pleas court.

Former Lieut. Gov. Paul M. Herbert, who represented Nevius in opposition to a supreme court review, argued the appellate court's decision was strictly in accordance with law and supreme court decisions and should be permitted to stand. He contended there had been no evidence submitted connecting Nevius and the proprietors of the gambling house.

The case was heard by six judges as Judge Charles B. Zimmerman of Springfield disqualified himself because he said he was a resident of Springfield and knew most of the persons involved in the case and had heard the case frequently discussed, sometimes very heatedly.

Prosecutor Nevius was present at the hearing as was his father and a brother. The court took the case under advisement.

Boyle Retraces Bloody Road Back To Cassino

By HAL BOYLE
AP Newsfeatures Writer

CASSINO, ITALY, April 19.—The road back to war is a strange and new.

All the ingredients of battle are missing except the ruins. Only by such odd and haphazard means as a few roadside graves, an occasional rusted tank, some small forgotten stacks of ammunition can you read the story of the siege of Cassino.

These small memorabilia of battle can only hint at the long heartache and dull misery this mountain village symbolizes. A thousand Allied soldiers in the early months of 1944.

Nature, which heals or kills, has taken care of the rest. The road to Cassino was once a dreary trail of mud and blood and weary tears. It was tedious as a dull football game in which no one scored.

Lives were lost for yards. It was the endless agony and crash of sound and it broke men's hearts and minds and bodies. It was rain and damp wind and cringing cold for bleak weeks.

Nothing like it.

It wasn't hell, because hell is heated. It wasn't life because life has moments of rest. And it wasn't death because you still could move—any direction but forward. It wasn't anything but Cassino—and Cassino was life and death and hell in one bitter draught.

Riding back along that road to day you feel like some drowned ghost foreordained to revisit scenes of an ancient disaster and live again that old agony which still stirs many veterans in twilight dreams of that vanished frustration that hit or heartache—Cassino.

Cassino was only one major signpost on the road to Rome. It was preceded by several miniature Cassinos. Among them was the Million Dollar Hill so named by combat troops who figured it took that much costly aillery fire to soften its defenses for the doughboy's attack.

In these days it was a large hill. It rises 700 yards as Mt. Verucchio alone. Now like other mountains in the area, after 30 years nature has taken the road of life that day. A funeral arrangement is being made to the hill as a capital for a memorial to the arrival of children from bidding features are veiled by a distance.

George W. Dodd Dies at Daughter's Home

George W. Dodd 81 died about 8:45 a.m. today in the home of a daughter Mrs. F. Hel Denbarger at 597 Oak street. He had been ill for two weeks.

He was a May call at the Mt. Verucchio alone. Now like other mountains in the area, after 30 years nature has taken the road of life that day. A funeral arrangement is being made to the hill as a capital for a memorial to the arrival of children from bidding features are veiled by a distance.

3 ELECTRIC CO-OPS LOSE $290,000 SUIT

Union Co. Unit Shares in Ohio Court Defeat.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., April 19.—W. R. Cutnaw of Columbus was awarded $290,000 yesterday by Franklin county common pleas court in his breach of contract suit against three rural electric cooperatives.

Cutnaw sued for $325,000 claiming that was his rightful share of a joint purchase made by the companies of the Midland Light and Power Co.

The issue represented Cutnaw's estimate of a 13 mile railroad running between Oberlin Junction and the Pickaway power station of the Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Co.

The suit stemmed from a three-year-old agreement between Cutnaw and South Central Rural Electric of Lancaster Union Rural Electric of Marietta and Inter County Rural Electric of Hillsboro.

The cooperatives under a joint agreement in the purchase of the company from Associated Electric were to furnish $1,800,000. Cutnaw's contribution was to be $100,000.

An initial bid was rejected but a second bid of $2,125,000 was accepted April 15, 1944.

Cutnaw claimed his agreement on the first bid applied to the second and he sued for $325,000, his estimate of the railroad's worth.

Eugene Hensel counsel for the cooperatives said he would appeal the verdict.
